FOREWORD

This is only the third of the Gibbs Estate auctions. I have tried to divide the estate in certain parts in order that collectors who missed out in one sale will have a chance in another. Also I realized that it will take some time before the world of coin collectors is aware that after the Gibbs Estate no other large primitive money collections may come up for sale. By dividing it in parts those who did not realize this, now have a possibility. Gibbs did not collect duplicates. If he had two coins or primitive money items which to you and us look alike, you can be sure they were varieties. It was my decision in such cases to put one variety in one, the other in another sale. Therefore—if you missed out on a lot in an earlier Gibbs sale, possibly you have a chance in this or later sales. We planned 4 sales to begin with (catalogs $1 each). There certainly will be more.

HANS SCHULMAN

BELGIUM-CONGO

- 198 TUKULA PASTE BLOCK . . . OR . . . RED CLAY AND WOOD MONEY . . . BUSHONGO TRIBE. A Hingston Quiggin, "A Survey of Primitive Money" printed by Methuen & Co. 1949 Page 80-81 Illustrations Page 81.

"Belgium-Congo Money . . . this long catalogue may end with the CAKES OF RED POWDER which represented MONEY in the Belgium-Congo. Dapper, in his Description de l'Afrique (1686, Page 367) speaks of red pieces of wood about a foot long taking the place of money in the West. This refers to the cakes of TUKULA (Nkulu, ngula, which besides being in daily use, are popular in present-giving (especially at funeral ceremonies), in barter and as money, and are traded along the SANKURU-KASAI in the South, and from the Upper Congo to it's mouth. Various redwood trees (especially baphia nitida or camwood grow abundantly in the Congo forests, but are not found everywhere. This wood of a beautiful deep-red colour, is hard and heavy which discourages transportation, but when it is rotten it is easily ground with a stone and water and the powder is made into cakes. These flat cakes stamped with patterns suggest comparisons with brick tea, though the uses are different. This powder is mixed with oil and spread over the body, it is used for stiffening the coiffure, for dyeing cloth, both native and European and for colouring woodwork and pots. The red colour appears here, as elsewhere to have special virtue and it is TUKULA that provides much of that general reddish tinge so characteristic of West Africa material culture. The TUKULA cakes from the BUSHONGO between the SANKURU and the KASAI, illustrated (Fig. 10) is fresh and red but after much handling the cakes become black and shiny, and scarcely recognizable. (Torday & Joyce 1911 Fig. 111 pp 129-165; Maes 1920; Mahieu (Belgium Numismatic Revue) 1924 pp 39-40.

FORMOSA

Money Jacket

- 452 Tyal Head Hunter Tribe. NOTE: Quoted description from Japanese writer:

"Tyal tribe is in the north-eastern mountainous part. The Tyal is a fierce head-hunting tribe which was subjugated by the Japanese army about 1900 A. D. Most of these jackets seem to have been brought back to Japan while Japan ruled Formosa for about 50 years. They are now very rare, hardly available at any curio stores. Generally owned by some ethnologists. It has 2,600 strings of beads, each string having about 20 to 23 beads. The total number of beads would amount to about 36,000. These beads were all hand made by a native who polished into round shape on whet (as copied) stone putting the small fragments of holed shells on a tense bow string. The cloth material on which this enormous number of beads are sewn is also native's home spun, dyed in beautiful scarlet striped in white lines. One jacket is an accumulation of labor by which fine cattle and several wives can be bought.

I know of a very smart coin dealer on the Ginza (the Fifth Avenue of Tokyo) who made a big profit by splitting this kind of jacket into many hundreds of fragments and selling each piece at several dollars! I am quite sure the whole jacket is a very nice ethnological and numismatic specimen and difficult to obtain. We find sometimes a square cloth fragment with similar bead-strings. The technical name of the jacket is SHU I SHU-KUN (JEWELLED SCARLET ROBE).

It is difficult to express a value but as this is worth many wives, you can judge the price yourselves".

(This specimen is much better than lot 949 Lee collection). Many beads missing because that money was spent by the person who wore jacket. Sold in Oct. Sale

I have bought a book entitled "Guide to Formosan Museum" (written in Japanese) in which there are about two pages on how a Japanese fisherman who was drifted to the coast of Tiyal tribe's district, made to work on the manufacturing of shell beads for SHU-1 SHU-KUN jackets. ### KURDISTAN

588 Mountain tribes. Turkey-Persia. Heavy solid arm ring. Ornatly decorated; hooks at ends for chain fastener. Brass. 5 inches. c. 1400 AD. VF. ($100.-150.)

The natives of Kurdistan are mostly wild mountain tribes, alien to the Turks in language and to Persian in religion. Entire district engages in chronic warfare, are wild, lawless brigands who have always oppressed the Armenians in Diarbekir, Erzerum, Can.; Jacobites and Syrians in Jebel: Nestorians and Chaldeans in Hakpari. Since they have no definite place of abode most of the mountain tribes carry their entire possession with them and are constantly on the move. There wealth consists of gold coins fastened in long chains and bracelets of silver which are worn on all parts of the body. They are fierce fighters and wonderful horsemen. Most of their weapons, coins and money bracelets are centuries old and are handed down from one generation to another.

THE RARITIES OF THE SALE

ALASKA

- 648 Alaskan Copper Plate with designs. This big copper plate representing a wealth of 7500 blankets formed the wealth of a community. 47¾ inches high – 24 inches wide. H. D. Gibbs valued it at $7,500. A magnificent museum piece. We copy from National Museum Report 1895, page 344:

Still more complicated is the purchase or the gift, however one chooses to term it, of the "copper." All along the North Pacific Coast, from Yakutat to Comox, curiously shaped copper plates are in use, which in olden times were made of native copper, which is found in Alaska and probably also on Nass River, but which nowadays are worked out of imported copper. The typical shape of these copper plates may be seen in Museum Report. The T-shaped part (qa'la's), which forms two ridges, is hammered. The top is called "the face" (o'cuxLEme), the lower part the hind end (o'nutsExste). The front of the copper is covered with black lead, in which a face, representing the crest animal of the owner, is graven. These coppers have the same function which bank notes of high denominations have with us. The actual value of the piece of copper is small, but it is made to represent a large number of blankets and can always be sold for blankets. The value is not arbitrarily set, but depends upon the amount of property given away in the festival at which the copper is sold. On the whole, the oftener a copper is sold the higher its value, as every new buyer tries to invest more blankets in it. Therefore the purchase of a copper also brings distinction, because it proves that the buyer is able to bring together a vast amount of property.

Each copper has a name of its own, and from the following list of coppers, which were in Fort Rupert in 1893, the values attached to some of them may be seen:

Ma'xts'olEm (all other coppers are ashamed to look at it), 7,500 blankets.
L'a'xolamas (steel-hand salmon, i.e., it glides out of one's hands like a salmon), 6,000 blankets.

Lo'peLila (making the house empty of blankets), 5,000 blankets.

DE'nt'alayo (about whose possession all are quarreling).

Man'ak'a (sea lion).

Qau'lo'ma (beaver face).

Le'ita (looking below; namely, in order to find blankets with which to buy it).

Nu'se (moon; its engraving represents the half moon, in which a man is sitting).

Ga'waqa (a spirit. He'iltsuq dialect, corresponding to Kwakiutl Ts'o'noqoa).

NE'lqEmala (day face).

NE'nqEmala (bear face).

K'a'na (crow; He'iltsuq dialect).

Qoayi'm (whale).

Ma'x'enoX (killer whale).

Qoayi'mk'in (too great a whale).

Wi'na (war, against the blankets of the purchaser).

Our picture shows one of Howard's coppers many years ago. ($3,500.–4,500.)

- 649 Smaller copper, 42 inches high, 25¼ inches wide. Extremely fine. Extremely rare. ($2,000.–3,000)

BURMA'S KYEE-ZEE OR RAIN DRUMS

Karen tribes of East Burma.

Than Tribes. 1400 A.D.

- 650 Kyee-zee bronze gong or drum. Four raised frogs on top. Top 18 inches diameter, 14 inches high and bottom is 14 inches wide.

"I searched for one of these gongs for over 25 years. Finally in Bangkok May 1964 I bought this one after visiting every antique dealer. In one temple saw four such gongs gold plated." H. D. Gibbs.

Note: "On the outer circle are 4 raised frogs, as the figure of the cat sometimes surmounted the ancient sistrum. Whether the sound of the instrument is intended to emulate the voice of the frog or not, must be left to conjecture, for no one can give any reason for the frog being there." Conjectures include rainmaking and fertility rites (frog). In settlement of quarrels and redemption of captives, the indemnification always takes the shape of kyee-zee or more, just as in more civilized countries concession of territory and perhaps some men-of-war is insisted upon.

See: Mort Reed, Coin World, July 27, 1962; Quiggin pages 208/9, plate 19 no. 3. We use their photograph. See Schulman Primitive Money 1967, page 6.

See: Marshall, Karen People of Burma, 1922, page 91; Quiggin, pages 208/9, plate 19; S. V. Darwin, page 217.

($750.-1,000)

- 652 Unusual type Karen Kyee-zee bronze gong money. 19 inches across, 4½ inches high. Has four flat frogs and three raised dragons; raised knob in center enclosed by circle of ornate design.
